I decided to take a break, go for a pee and buy some treats for work. My mate came to me and I asked why he hadn't bought any food, he said that he'd left his wallet in his backpack, so I thought he was joking but it seems he wasn't. He said that he didn't want to go back for it. I had to go back and get it, I rang my mate and asked him what was up. He said that he'd left his wallet in his locker at work. I got all pissed off, I was starting to get really annoyed because he didn't want to go back for it. Anyway, I didn't go back to get his wallet. My mate said that he didn't want to go back for it and that it was really an inconvenience. I felt really annoyed and he could have just said he left it somewhere. A perfect example of a lack of ethics. First thing you notice about someone who suffers from this trait is that they don't really care. They just go ahead and do something without regard to the people involved, especially if they come from a family that you know would normally say no. It's really common in small towns where there isn't much to do, and in big towns people will try and have their own agenda, like getting the best table, or getting a free drink or getting a free cab. You can always find something that people won't normally do for free. If 82157476af
